From Your Associational Missionary:

Recently as I was cleaning out my car, I came across a plastic Easter egg I had purchased to use as an illustration in a sermon. It had been awhile since the illustration had been used, but it did trigger the story about Phillip.

You see, Phillip was a special needs child who had been placed in a third grade Sunday School class although he was a little older than the class. Because he was "different" the boys and girls didn't know how to relate to him. They were nice and courteous but Phillip didn't quite fit in.

One Sunday in the spring, the teacher gave the boys and girls an assignment for the following week. She gave each child a plastic Easter egg and asked them to put something inside that represented new life.

The next week the children brought their eggs back and were excited about seeing what was in each egg. As the teacher opened up the first egg there was a beautiful flower inside, another had a bloom, another had a new leaf, and another had a butterfly (it had been "new"). Each child "oohed" and "ahhed" as they saw "new life" in each egg. The last two eggs were different—the first had a rock (must have been a boy's) and the last one was totally empty—nothing inside. Several children spoke up and said, "someone must have forgotten to do their assignment". But Phillip was standing by the teacher tugging on her dress and telling her—"Teacher, that's mine." The teacher then asked Phillip why it was empty. He simply responded—"I have new life because the grave is empty. I have new life because the grave is empty."

That day Phillip was accepted by his classmates because they understood that he knew what "new life" was all about.

Several months later Phillip became very ill with a high fever. The doctors did everything they could do to stop the illness but Phillip died. At the funeral service every one of Phillip's Sunday School classmates walked up to the casket and placed empty plastic Easter eggs inside the casket. They knew that Phillip had new life because the grave is empty.

That is why we celebrate Easter—the grave is empty!

Baptist Collegiate Ministries

Everyone at the Baptist Collegiate Ministries would like to thank everyone who helped promote our Dinner Theater! We would also like to thank everyone who attended! All of you helped to make this one of the most successful Dinner Theaters we've ever had! This was the second highest attended Dinner Theater in the last six years and the highest grossing in the last six years! This has brought us right to the brink of making our BCM Summer Missions goals for this year. This money will help send out our Georgia BCM students to five continents this summer. We hope everyone has a blessed spring.

God Bless!
Bill

From The WMU

I want to share some ideas you might could use for your women's mission meeting in your church.

- Plan a WorldCrafts party. During this party you will learn about the many WorldCrafts artisan groups who find freedom from poverty or sexual slavery. Visit WorldCrafts.org for ideas, tips, and everything you need to know for hosting this missions based party.
- Plan a trip to Birmingham and tour National WMU
- Try a progressive meeting beginning at the first location for the Missionary Spotlight Study, move to another location for the Bible Study section, and conclude at the final location for the Prayer Study. (You might include an appetizer, small meal, and dessert at each stop if you would like.)

- PrayerWalk your church or a neighborhood near your church.
- Volunteer at the Carroll County Soup Kitchen
- Bake and bag cookies for UWG students at the BCM (Baptist Collegiate Ministries).
- Plan a meeting/activity with a nearby church.
- Call and plan a visit to the PRC, Pregnancy Resource Center, and learn about their services.

- Organize a crafters "on-mission" meeting.
- Look at the Local Ministries list on our website www.carrolltonwmu.com and discuss with your group how you might serve and help with one of the ministries.

Thank you for all you do,
